Coverage: 1922–1993

For news from historical Harlem to contemporary communities, start here.

From an initial $10 investment, the New York Amsterdam News grew to become one of the nation's leading black newspapers and one of New York's most influential black-owned institutions. For nearly a century, it has helped influence and promote the causes and aspirations of African-Americans.

The New York Amsterdam News captured the vibrancy and cultural richness of the Harlem Renaissance in the 1920s, advocated for the desegregation of the U.S. military during World War II, and fought against discriminatory employment practices and other civil rights abuses in the 1960s. Today, the New York Amsterdam News continues to deliver local, national, and international stories of interest to its multicultural readership.

More than 70 continuous years of cover-to-cover news from this remarkable publication is available online now from ProQuest.

Focus on research instead of the mechanics of finding data.

ProQuest makes it easy for both novice researchers and information professionals to find relevant information quickly, with basic and advanced search options. Searches can be confined to specific article types and dates to focus on the most relevant information. Each newspaper page is zoned into article images, and each newspaper image is supported with searchable ASCII text. Combined, these features mean faster, more effective searches for users. ProQuest digitizes documents at the highest possible resolution to deliver clean, readable images, and highlights search terms to focus readers on the most relevant content.

Researchers can sort their results by oldest, most recent, or most relevant. In addition, stories that originally spanned multiple pages of a newspaper are “threaded” together, appearing as one continuous image and improving readability. Users can view and easily download articles, front pages, photos, display ads, and more in PDF format. The “My Research” summary feature can be used to track recent searches, save articles, email documents, create a bibliography, export citations, and create Web pages.
